BIOGRAPHY

Tiziana Rozzo is a fine art photographer based in Boston who visually investigates the connection between identity, land and the family. She truly believes in the power photography has to tell a story and how it is a way of self-reflection, introspection and healing.

Tiziana was born and raised near Venice (Italy) and moved to the U.S.A. in 2005. After a career in Neuroscience at prestigious universities in both Italy and Germany, she focused energies to take care of her four young children. During that time she developed an interest in the visual arts. She studied photography at the Massachusetts Art&Design School, at the New England School of Photography (NESOP)'s night workshops and at the The Maine Media Workshops, working with Brandon Thibodeaux and Cig Harvey.

Tiziana has exhibited in many juried group shows in New England, including the Griffith Museum and the DanforthArt Museum. Her portfolio was showcased by the Davis Orton Gallery in 2016. She was a recipient of the Arnold P. Gold Foundation Grant for the Arts, Medicine and Humanities, Harvard Medical School and a finalist for the 2016 John Chervinsky Emerging Photographer Scholarship.
