

Marcy Juran

Marcy Juran is a visual artist with a practice that includes photography, encaustic and handmade paper. Juran's focus combines personal narratives with the natural environs of her native New England. She began her work in photography at Cranbrook Academy of Art, where she concentrated in graphic design. Throughout her career in design, she collaborated with numerous photographers, creating award-winning work strongly grounded in photographic storytelling

Her photographs have been exhibited at spaces throughout the United States, including the Griffin Museum of Photography, the Davis Orton Gallery, the SOHO Gallery, Sohn Fine Art, the SE Center for Photography, and the A Smith Gallery. In Connecticut, her work has been shown at the Carriage Barn Arts Center, the Rowayton Arts Center, The Ridgefield Guild of Artists, The Westport Arts Center, The Bendheim Gallery, The Ely Center and the Kershner gallery. Her work has also been published in the online publications Fraction, Lenscratch and Don't Take Pictures. In 2017, her book, SALT MARSH SEASONS, was selected for inclusion in the Eighth Annual Self-published Photobook Show at the Davis Orton Gallery and the Griffin Museum of Photography.

Juran holds an A.B. in Studio Art from Brown University, with additional studies in graphic design, printmaking, and photography at the Rhode Island School of Design, Cranbrook, and the Maine Media Workshops. She has studied with Cig Harvey, Valda Bailey, Doug Chinnery, Brenton Hamilton, Susan Burnstine, Aline Smithson, Karen Divine, John Paul Caponigro, and Edward Koren. She works from her studio in Westport, Connecticut, and is an exhibiting member of the New Canaan Society for the Arts, the Rowayton Arts Center, and the Ridgefield Guild of Artists.
