

WANDERLUST

Connected by metaphor, place and association, disparate images are woven together as are life experiences in dreams. Wanderings through memory, body, mind and world are synchronized into a rhythm of thought, like a chord...walking and falling...

The word wanderlust designates a strong desire for and an impulse to wander. This body of work is the result of allowing myself to wander through influences, impulses and all of those ideas that I left behind on the cutting room floor, so to speak.

The works are drawn from images that I have taken over the years during my wanderings. This work combines landscape images and glimpses of daily routine in ways that address the layered and fragile nature of time, sense of place and memory. Home is a memory...